

GREEN SEA MONSTER GUEST OF BISBEE

He Will Probably Remain in the Town Indefinitely

Hon. Green Sea Turtle is in the city from Guaymas, Mex. He arrived yesterday morning by express consigned to J. E. Morrison, United States attorney, as a present from his friend Max Marks, formerly of Bisbee but now a resident of Guaymas.

The arrival of the young sea monster in "our midst" has revived the old question, "Is a turtle a fish or an animal?" but this is not worrying the United States attorney nearly as much as the question, "What shall I do with him, sea or land?"

The turtle weighs something like 150 pounds and one of Mr. Morrison's friends has suggested that he give a turtle soup party and invite the whole territory and that the remainder be prorated among the people of Texas. M. J. Cunningham suggested that the animal or fish be put "in the park" but this is overruled by the possibility that the turtle might swallow the park.

The turtle was at Mosher's market on Main street and in his comfortable corpulence somewhat resembles one of the democratic candidates for governor of Arizona, saving his grace. There is some talk of arranging a thousand-yard dash between the turtle and a Don Luis Jack rabbit, but some remembering the traditional heat in which the rabbit was doped and was overcome by sleep, fear the race would not be on the level.

As a matter of fact, however, none of these things will be done to the turtle. It will be butchered and made into mulligan that will be the piece de resistance and the hors d'oeuvre at a feast at the Elks club Saturday night.

DUMAS, Ark., Sept. 27.—Breaking in county jail a mob overpowering the jailers took Charles Malpass, Sr., white, to a water tank and lynched him. The lynching was the result of the shooting yesterday at Malpass home of Sheriff Preston, and Deputy Stiel, and two mulatto sons of Malpass. The officers had gone to the Malpass home to arrest the sons.

DRINKING BOUT ENDS IN HOSPITAL VISIT

With his head swollen to nearly twice its ordinary size and swathed in bandages Jose Jimenez was a passenger on the evening train en route to the county hospital for treatment. He was a sorry spectacle as the result of a severe beating which he had received at Fairbank.

According to the story which Jimenez tells he was one of a party in Fairbank that was convivial in character at the outset but which later became bellicose. What started the riot was not disclosed but the injured man maintains that all the rest of the party turned upon him and that as a result he got the worst of the ensuing battle. In his statement his appearances certainly bear him out. He was accompanied to the hospital by Deputy Sheriff Allie Howe.

BAILEY'S POSING DOGS A CLASSIC NUMBER

Bailey's Posing Dogs appearing at the Orpheum this week are indeed wonderful in their work. They are not of the commonplace "dog act" kind, such as jumping the stick, walking around in different attitudes, etc., but pose classic paintings in the different tableaux, making a living statue in each picture. The subjects posed last night were "At Rest," "Coaxing," "The Wounded Paw," "Offering Prayer before the Star," "Off for the Hunt," "On the Trail," "Faithful Friends," "The Wounded Dog," "Death of Man's Most Faithful Friend," and "A Broken Heart."

The dogs, King, Queen and Prince, are full blooded Llewellyn Setters and beautiful in their poses and out.

The "King" was used on a hunting trip by ex-President Roosevelt shortly after the famous African hunt, and acquitted himself with high honors as a field dog. Seymour and Williams furnish the contrast on the evening performance, and likewise the comedy. Their work is exceedingly clever and they brought down the house with their original "daffydils," many of which were of local character. Mr. Seymour sang "The Vale of Dreams," and "River Shannon," and his rich tenor was well appreciated by the audience. They were forced to take several curtain calls on the finale of their act.

In motion pictures, "The Sheriff's Friend," a Vitaphone production of western life, must be conceded the feature place on the program, though not far behind in prominence, though of a different character, "The Soul of a Violin" must be placed.

Both are exceptionally fine dramas. The comedy pictures, "The Secret," and "The Fountain of Youth," came in for many hearty laughs.

The music furnished by Alden's orchestra helped to bring out the many different situations in the pictured stories. Appropriate music for the action in the pictures is always to be desired, and the Orpheum can well feature their orchestra.

This program will be repeated to night, and on Friday an entire change of pictures will be shown.

The announcement is that a venison mulligan will be served to patrons at 11 o'clock and such service will continue until the supply has been exhausted. 33.

SUPERVISORS IGNORE PRECINCT OFFICERS

Issue Election Call for All State and County Officers—Advice Wanted

TOMBSTONE, Sept. 27.—(Special)—At the meeting of the board of supervisors held here this evening an election call was issued which does not specify precinct officers, merely stating for state and county officers.

When the question of precinct officers being embodied in the call was brought up it was considered best to take legal advice on the subject since the governor and secretary of state appeared to differ in their interpretation of the law. It was then decided merely to call an election for representative in congress and all state and county officers and to delay action on precinct officers until next Monday when the regular meeting of the board will be held. Meantime legal advice on the subject will have been obtained and action along the line of such advice, should it be that precinct officers should be included, may then be taken.

This was the only business of importance before the board.

MUTINY REARS ITSELF AT NAGO MISCAL CAUSE

deserted street, others squatted about the door and on the curbing, and others lay asleep on the dirt floor of the barracks.

Smoked and Waited. Across the town, at the old Kosteritzky barracks, the newly arrived soldiers from Cananea smoked innumerable cigarettes and waited for the situation to spew itself away. Crowds of the curious thronged about the platform of the adobe houses. The door was guarded by a Mexican with a carbine, dressed in overall trousers and a khaki coat. On the other side of the doorway stood a five-foot Mexican, armed with two belts of cartridges. Inside the building the thirty and five soldiers sat or squatted along the rear wall smoking cigarettes, silent and moody, their arms stacked. A wary, black-moustached officer in a white cotton shirt and overall trousers gave an order in strident accents that, from the spirit of it, might have been something like "cut away the mast," but which translated meant, "clear the doorway."

The Peaceful End.

"What is the next move?" was the question asked of the camp leaders, but the only answer was "Quiet sabot," accompanied by a shifting of the shoulders. Apparently the song "Every Little Movement has a Meaning of Its Own," has no meaning in Mexico. Under ordinary conditions the situation at Nago yesterday would have resulted in bloodshed ten times out of ten in any country other than Mexico. The garrison had mutinied and was in control of the town. The railroad entry into the city was guarded. A train bearing military troops was rushing in to reclaim the city from the mutineers. There was every indication of trouble in the abstract, but when the forces of war began to arrange themselves in a businesslike manner, the inspiration vanquished.

Unless the truce declared yesterday afternoon results in a compromise, the possibilities of trouble still exist in Nago. The mutineers still have their arms, and as their number is about equal to that of the squad from Cananea, they would perhaps be able to hold their own against the Cananea troops in a fight. American officers at Nago, however, do not believe in the possibility of revolution will get out of the cocoon state.

When the news of a possible fight arrived in Bisbee, several auto loads of eighth-seers went down to the border city, and a number were there from Douglas.

While the immediate cause of the mutiny was the attempted enforcement of discipline on the part of the commissaries, it is said that the trouble is grounded in a deeper cause, namely, a dislike by the troops of the Gayon regime, which was installed at the port several weeks ago. One of this regime is a son of the vice governor, who holds a position in the customs office there, who, it is said, is greatly disliked by the soldiers.

FREIGHT RATES AND THE CONSUMER

The ultimate consumer in the United States suffers no injury from an increase of freight rates, according to E. P. Ripley, president of the Santa Fe railroad. Freight rates are not nearly so important to the welfare of the average citizen as the average citizen believes, and the average citizen would not know it if the freight rates were increased from fifteen to twenty-five per cent tomorrow, unless it was published in the newspapers.

By way of illustrating the truth of these statements and also showing the utter absurdity of the continual cry of retailers that higher prices are the direct result of freight rates, Mr. Ripley cites that a pair of shoes, costing three dollars and a half in Chicago cost four dollars here—an increase of fifty cents. When the retailer shouts "high freight rates," yet it is a positive fact, according to the chief executive of the Santa Fe that the freight rate on that pair of shoes from Chicago to Los Angeles or San Francisco was about two cents—about a postage stamp.

Freight charges fifty cents more for the shoes because he had to pay the same price to get them here as he did to send an order for them. "Freight rates" is, seemingly, merely the easiest reply to customers who complain about excessive prices. The customer doesn't know the truth and the railroads have no opportunity to tell him.

Another instance is cited: A glass of beer or a five cent cigar in Denver taken to itself an additional value of ten cents in Leadville, Colo. The absurdity of charging the added ten cents to freight rates is apparent at a glance. A man could make money, if he were the case, carrying cigars between the points mentioned, on foot.

Just what freight rates amount to has been shown recently in bulletins distributed among their employees by several western roads. In these pamphlets, the exact cost of transporting a ton of freight is given in terms of tools and supplies used by the employees.

For instance, a broom. A car sweeper steps on the handle of his broom, damaging it so it is of no further use. He goes to the storekeeper and secures another, and thinks little or nothing of the accident. Yet, in order to offset this waste, the company employing him must transport a ton of freight—a good many pairs of shoes or cigars—thirty-five miles. The retailer

ONE QUESTION RAISED AND ANOTHER DECIDED

Washington's Workingmen's Compensation Act Held to Be Constitutional

UKIAH, Sept. 27.—The struggle between settlers and the L. E. White Lumber company for possession of rich timber lands along Alder creek reached a crisis today when H. E. Warren, a settler, was driven off the land and his cabin razed to the ground. Warren was warned not to come back.

The settlers have already petitioned Secretary of the Interior Fisher. They admit that they fear the lumber company's armed men, and are anxiously awaiting their next move. Efforts to persuade the women to leave that territory and leave the men to handle the situation, are futile.

The officials of the lumber company assert that the settlers are impostors trying to blackmail the company out of the land which they have already paid for two or three times.

CALIFORNIA SETTLERS WAR WITH LUMBER CO.

The Former Have Appealed to the Secretary of the Interior

OLYMPIA, Wash., Sept. 27.—The state supreme court today upheld the constitutionality of the workingmen's compensation act.

The court said: "Business which seeks to profit at the risk of life or limb of human beings is subject to regulation. The law is, or ought to be, a progressive science, and the constitution must be construed in the light of our changed conditions."

Judge Fullerton wrote the decision. It is the result of a suit for a writ of mandate brought against the state auditor by a Tacoma firm to force the auditor to pay a claim for furniture. Auditor Clausen contended that the law was unconstitutional, and refused to draw a warrant. All the constitutional questions were raised on this issue. In every instance the court held that the law was valid. The decision was signed by the full court.

ITALIAN SQUADRON FACING TRIPOLI

TRIPOLI, Sept. 27.—The first Italian squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Aubrey, composed of four dreadnoughts, three cruisers and several torpedo boats, are now anchored off Tripoli.

The second squadron is at Larento awaiting orders to convey the transports. Up to the present, no Italian force has landed at Tripoli. This is the situation tonight in the Turkish-Italian dispute over Tripoli affairs.

SCIENTIFIC SELECTIONS

How National Guard Is to Be Kept Up Hereafter.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 27.—Adjutant General Forbes, of the state militia, received orders from Washington to detail one man from each company of the militia of the state as a recruiting officer. The duty of these officers will be to recruit the national guard to war strength in case of a call for volunteers.

These men will be transferred to the state mobilization grounds at Anacostia, where they will be examined physically, all who qualify will be given as much preparation as time warrants. The plan is expected to do away with the old scheme of accepting any and all men whether fit or not.

TREATMENT OF INSANE.

Group of Twenty Taken to Washington, D. C.

VALLEJO, Sept. 27.—Twenty insane patients of the Ukiah state asylum will be taken east for treatment at the government hospital for the insane at Washington, D. C., during the coming week. A number of naval surgeons and a corps of hospital stewards will have charge of the patients on the trip.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Harold H. Hilton, the British golfer, will return to this country next year to defend his title as American champion which he won in the recent national golf tournament, at Rye, New York. He sailed for home today aboard the Campana.

GERMANY SENDS WORD BACK.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—The German foreign minister today communicated to M. Cambon, the French ambassador, the reply of Germany to the latest Moroccan proposals by France.

While the public believe that it costs fifty cents to carry a pair of shoes from Chicago to the Pacific coast, when, in reality, the transportation companies are paid at the rate of one kitchen broom per ton for carrying thirty-five miles.

CIVIL SERVICE AND DIPLOMATICS

by Great Britain, affords a fair example of the departure from the civil service system to accomplish certain results, as that country applies the civil service to its consular force and in part to its diplomatic branch. Practically all of the ambassadors from the United States have been chosen from outside the service, by the president, in whom that power is vested, but it is noticeable that in the latest great change in that service growing out of the resignation of Ambassador Hill at Berlin, not only his successor, but a long line of promotions following, were made by the president among men who had long been in the diplomatic service.

Geographical Allotment.

The rule which provides that appointment to the service shall be apportioned as nearly as possible to population should be inquired into by prospective candidates before going to the trouble and expense of fitting themselves for the positions. Each state is allotted, by this system, a certain number of diplomatic and consular places, which, provided a vacancy exists, can be filled by one of its citizens.

While this regulation is strictly adhered to by the state department, occasionally a vacancy occurs which has to be filled by a candidate from a state whose quota is already exhausted because no candidate has appeared or passed the examination from a state entitled to an appointment. It sometimes occurs that a candidate from the state whose quota is full may successfully pass the examination, but be denied admission because of that fact, there being no vacancy to which he is entitled. Candidates who are very desirable sometimes fall on this account.

Politics Cut Little Figure.

Frequently, the complaint is made, not only to the department, but elsewhere, that politics play a conspicuous part in the selection of diplomatic and consular officers. It is only on the rarest occasions that this is true now, and the department is generally blameless for the exceptions. The constitution confers upon the senate the right to give "advice and consent" to the president upon appointments to both services, and it is here that politics enters into the selection and members of congress are responsible for it. To avoid this difficulty, as far as possible, all candidates wishing the appointment to either branch, are required by the state department to secure the endorsement of one or both of the senators from their state as a preliminary to designation. The department also requires that each candidate shall furnish references as to character, these being not necessarily from politicians.

The state department is encountering less and less interference each year in the matter of appointment to the diplomatic and consular services, from politicians. The beginning of the present system met with great opposition from congress, but at the present time, this opposition has been reduced to a minimum, and the merits of the system are becoming manifest in the increased efficiency of the services rendered.

San Joaquin Autoist Will Remain in Jail.

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 27.—W. F. Vardy, a well known automobilist of this city is passing ten days in the county jail rather than pay a fine of ten dollars imposed for speeding. He declared that he was innocent and would not permit the police to use his money to pay motorcycle policemen to catch speeders.

MOVE IN PRESCOTT TO GET TOGETHER

The Get Together dinner of the Prescott chamber of commerce last week was an unqualified success from every standpoint and produced an amount of enthusiasm which exceeded the fondest hopes of its initiators. One hundred and fifty sat at the tables which were decorated with fruits. Colonel Tilson, commanding Whipple barracks, made one of the finest addresses ever heard in this city. The central thought of the colonel's talk was "God made the country and man makes the town." He thought God had put pretty good material into the men of Arizona and those of Prescott were no exceptions.

LeRoy Anderson stated that the United Verde Copper company is to make an investment of over $4,000,000 in a new smelter plant in the Verde valley near Jerome within the next two years and that work will commence at once. He added that the Humboldt Consolidated smelter is about to make extensions in its plant at Humboldt which now has a capacity of 850 tons of ore a day.

Marion Today Pays Penalty for Wife Murder.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Sept. 27.—Tomorrow is the day set for the execution in the Luzerne County jail of George L. Marion, the former theatrical man and hotel clerk, convicted of the murder of his wife, Frances Lee Brooks. The crime was committed nearly two years ago in the office of the chief of police.

The woman had deserted her husband for another man. Marion traced her to this city from Plainfield, N. J., and under pretense of effecting a reconciliation had the officers take her to the police headquarters. Then, when he was left alone with her for a minute, he shot her twice and killed her. At the trial he pleaded emotional insanity.
